Photoshop tools are far more powerful and useful than the toys found in most photo editors. * Figure 1-4. A powerful and effective editor like Photoshop enables you to do such things as create a selection, apply a range of transformations, and even create complex image layouts. * Figure 1-5. Here you see the completed arrangement of layers. Notice that some of the layers are flattened to the composition, leaving the areas that have a transparent background untouched. You can easily remove the background by turning off the visibility of the layers, as shown here. * Figure 1-6. The final step in this example is to tidy up the bottom layer with some of the tools found in Photoshop. Santorum used to be a Christian candidate. If he were going to win the election, what would he do differently? Santorum used to be a Christian candidate. If he were going to win the election, what would he do differently? By Kurt Helling, August 28, 2012 In 2012, the church is in a moment of crisis. Churches are closing and young people are leaving the faith. If the Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life is correct, three-quarters of Americans claim no religious affiliation. In the 1972 Presidential election, as a Christian, Senator Robert J. Dole (R-Kan.) ran for the Republican presidential nomination. His sole campaign platform was stated in his March 12, 1972 speech at a conference of young Republicans. During the debate which ensued, a person whose opinions I highly respect and admire asked me: "Senator Dole, if you ran for President this year what would be your main difference from your 1972 campaign?" His response was: "I would now emphasize my family experience. In 1972 my family and I moved from Wisconsin to Kansas." Therefore, if a Christian wants to win the White House, the candidate should emphasize his family experience. Bill Clinton once said, "The arc of the moral universe is long but it bends towards justice." On the other hand, President Obama has said there is no such thing as a Christian nation and has said that America is a nation "of Muslims and Christians." Does President Obama really believe that there is such a thing as a Christian nation? If not, why not? Moreover, why do only Christian nations exist? It's been observed that there is a distinction between religion and the state. My question is whether there is a distinction between Christianity and the Christian nation. The Founding Fathers believed in America's Christian heritage. They saw the separation of church and state as consistent with the separation of church and state in the First Amendment of the Constitution. [On June 14, 1779] Thomas Jefferson wrote, "On the religious side of the Constitution, I see nothing but what is called, a wall of separation between church and state." He added, "It is impossible to draw a line between church and state... in this country." My question is, is there a distinction between Christianity and the Christian nation? If
